BA Psychology (honours) students got opportunities to participate in sessions on mental health and LGBT community. Besides this there were many inter-disciplinary sessions in which participated and had a broader overview of the things beyond the curriculum. She is heading for a course at Harvard Business School.

Things are a bit different at St Xavier's College in Mumbai as it is an autonomous college. It has its own syllabus, and it ensures that the syllabus is not only challenging but also relevant to the needs of industry and society.

"Our methods of testing and assessing the educational growth of students vary from presentations to assignments to exhibitions to actually going out on the streets and engaging with the real world and then writing reports on it and later defending the reports," said the principal, Dr. Apollo Meneses. "For instance, our microbiology department carries out water testing in poor residential areas of the city. Every student has to put in 60 hours of social activity, as we believe that when the heart is touched by direct experience the mind is compelled to change. As students are encouraged to do an internship between the 4th and 5th semesters they are exposed to the job market and that is a win-win for the students as well as future employers."

The college keeps on introducing new courses as per the demand and requirement of the changing times. "The new courses that are emerging are public policy and biosciences. In humanities, psychology, literature and economics are in demand. In sciences, we have noticed that there is an increasing demand for life sciences and microbiology," said Meneses.

Innovation is the key also for the professional colleges. National Institute of Fashion Technology in Delhi, which is easily the best in India to study fashion technology, constantly tries to bring in innovation and improvement in order to distinguish itself from the scores of fashion technology institutes in the country. "Our strength is that our courses are completely based on merit and we keep on evolving ourselves by adapting to new changes in fashion technology such as ministry in fashion which means fashion inspired by nature," said Dr. Vandana Narang, campus director, NIFT, Delhi. The institute has 12 international presenting radio programmes from the institute itself." Suresh was a journalist at Press Trust of India and is planning to introduce courses in new media. The institute has a press where the students get a first-hand feel of the printing process. "Our students bring out lab journals from our press," said Suresh.

Getting hands-on experience is an important aspect of learning in all these colleges. At St. Stephen's, there are some 40 sections and each student has to register for at least four of them. "The ideas are generated and executed by students," said Professor John Varghese, principal of the 116-year-old institution. "There is a blend of theory and practical aspects. Students are trained as to how they can work on different projects. We do not force them to be part of any particular society. A student is free to choose his or her area of interest."

While everything boils down to the choice the students make, a few colleges clearly make a compelling case. And, it is exactly what makes them the best in the country. ■ for the Indian Information Services. It trains foreign journalists as well. "We have trained more than 1,500 foreign journalists," said K.G. Suresh, director general of the institute. "We also have a unique course in development journalism and run a community radio station—Alpha Radio. The students can directly get exposure to a child development campaign for Unilever and a corporate campaign for Domino's Pizza. I got to know how these campaigns work, what are their needs and how their future brand campaign is designed," said Saachi Soni, an advertising and public relations student at the institute.

The institute is a training academy
